TURN ON THE SEARCHLIGHT!

Somewhere between Professor von Jagemann's home at No. 113 Walker street, Cambridge, and the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Teel street, Arlington, there must be somebody who saw Annie Mullins and her escort on their walk or ride from the Professor's home between 7:05 and 10 o'clock on the night of Friday, March 27, the night Annie Mullins was brutally murdered in Squires field.

It is the duty of such person or persons to come forward and tell all they know—that all the light possible may be shed upon the mysterious assailant. And this without delay. To find the murderer information must be gained regarding the young woman's movements from the moment of her departure that night from Cambridge until she reached the lonely field where she was slain.

She was accompanied on the trip by a man.

It would have been utterly impossible for them to have gone that distance without being observed.

Were YOU anywhere in that vicinity that evening? If you were, study the face of Annie Mullins in the accompanying illustration, and if you think you saw her, can you describe her escort?

Your information, sent to the BOSTON AMERICAN office, may result in the capture and conviction of the murderer—THERE IS A $1,000 REWARD IF IT DOES.

ARLINGTON POLICE TRAIL
NEW ASSASSIN SUSPECT

CHIEF URQUHART AT WORK ON CLEWS THAT MAY QUICKLY LEAD TO SOLUTION OF MULLINS MURDER MYSTERY.

After the conclusion of the longest yesterday the police of Arlington and Cambridge started off on an entirely new clue which involves a suspect not before mentioned in connection with the death of Annie Mullins. This man is now being hunted in every direction. When he is located he will be questioned as to his whereabouts on last Friday night.

It is said that the clue leads toward New York and that the police of that city have been communicated with in an effort to ascertain if the person wanted has reached that city.

Repulsed by Girl.

From what has been told them the police believe that the man forced his attention on Annie Mullins and was repulsed, although it is quite possible that she accompanied him to Squires' field because he wanted to make some explanation of his conduct.

Both Peter Downey and John Leroy Fecker have been eliminated from the case entirely by the inquiry. The two men who were Annie Mullins told their stories without hesitating and satisfied the officials that they were telling the truth.

A number of witnesses who have been interviewed have told their stories without hesitating, although there were some things which they called upon the inquiry, but they were not taken into consideration. Peter Downey and John Leroy Fecker were the only two who were not taken into consideration.

Name Is Held Secret.

The chief has promised me that my name shall be kept out of the newspapers, and I want you to keep my name a secret until such time as publicity cannot be avoided.

"Why, when my friend and I met the couple that evening we passed no closer than thirty feet from them."

MURDERER PLANNED
CRIME SAYS SLEUTH

How pretty Annie Mullins was murdered last Friday night is described by Chief Inspector Patrick J. Hurley of the Cambridge police force. Inspector Hurley is a detective of years of experience. He has carefully examined the body of the young woman and has found many clues which he believes are the work of a murderer.

He says that the murderer at least planned the crime, and that he was not only cold and daring, but he was careful and methodical. He had thought not only of how he should kill the girl, but he thought of how he should get away without being detected.

Inspector P. J. Hurley.

The man who so fully murdered Annie Mullins was a man of about 30 years of age, of medium build, with dark hair and eyes, and a mustache. He was dressed in a dark suit and a white shirt with a dark tie.

He was fully prepared for the deed he intended to accomplish, and he executed it in a calm and collected manner. He had planned every detail of the crime, and he was not only cold and daring, but he was careful and methodical.

Crime All Aged.

Annie was her dinner at the von Jagemann house sometime between 6 and 7 o'clock on the night of her death. All of the police working on the case, and all of the witnesses who were interviewed, have agreed that Annie was her dinner at the von Jagemann house sometime between 6 and 7 o'clock on the night of her death.

BOMB TEARS
OFF HAND OF LITTLE BOY

NEW YORK, April 4.—Police reserves had to be called out at a school here, following the explosion of a small bomb, which tore the right hand off Frederick S. Lewis, eleven, and slightly hurt three other children, in a hallway in Avenue B.

It was at first reported an attempt had been made to wreck the building, and the crowd that gathered threatened the Italian police, but was easily dispersed.

Severe as is a bad way in the hospital, he told the police he found a little box, one of half-a-dozen, in a room in the cellar of No. 174 Third street. He was taking it home to show to his mother when, as he tried to run upstairs, he tripped and struck it against the wall. It exploded instantly. The police are looking for the bomb, but say it is left in the cellar, with him to see to it.

ARM SEVERED
BY TRAIN, BOY
SHOWS HIS GRIT

Though a today thirteen-year-old Andrew Haine, Jr., of Everett, lies in Waltham Memorial Hospital, weak from loss of blood through the loss of his arm, and suffering extreme agony, the doctors believe his remarkable luck will pull him through to health again.

Young Haine's courage was shown yesterday afternoon, when, after a freight train had run over his arm, and it was literally hanging by a shred of skin, he staid almost up from under the wheels, and called for the railroad station, and asked for a doctor.

While playing on the tracks of the Everett branch of the Boston & Maine Railroad, near his home, the boy had no idea of the danger of a passing train and was drawn under. His comrades fled in terror.

Immediately the wheels went over young Haine's arm, he first attempted to run under the wheels, but was unable to do so, and then he crawled out from under the wheels and escaped his arm. All the while he was crying out for help, and his comrades were trying to pull him out from under the wheels.

"Why," he called out, "take me to a hospital, will you? My arm is almost cut off." This was the only remark that slipped from the suffering boy.

The driver of the train took young Haine to and bled his arm in the hospital.

AGED MOTHER CRIES
OUT FOR VENGEANCE

Howling the entire time day and night writhing her hands, crying and calling upon God to wreak vengeance upon the head of the man who brutally murdered her long-lost daughter, Mrs. Mullins, the unfortunate and feeble mother of the murdered girl, is gradually becoming a physical and mental wreck.

Dispatches from St. John's, N. P., to the BOSTON AMERICAN indicate that, though Annie Mullins loved dearly her mother and friends, she had formed an attachment for someone who was not her father, and who made her always long to be back here whenever she was at her old home.

In 1906 she was at home for three months and told her folks it seemed like years since she was back in her old home. She was a very timid girl, and she was at home for three months and told her folks it seemed like years since she was back in her old home.

BULGER ARRESTED IN SOUTH BOSTON PROMPTLY SET FREE

Edward J. Bulger of 131 Broadway, South Boston, a 27-year-old man who had been charged with the murder of Annie Mullins, was arrested in South Boston on Friday night. He was promptly set free on bail.

WALKED TO DEATH
WITH TRUSTED ONE

The actual killing of Annie Mullins was a crime of the police of Arlington and Cambridge that was not only cold and daring, but it was careful and methodical.

He was fully prepared for the deed he intended to accomplish, and he executed it in a calm and collected manner. He had planned every detail of the crime, and he was not only cold and daring, but he was careful and methodical.

RYAN'S 'LOOT GIFT' STORY ABSURD, BLISS DECLARES

TREASURER OF REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE BREAKS LONG SILENCE.

NEW YORK, April 4.—For the first time since the scandal in connection with the contributions to the Republican national funds of 1904 and 1906, has been cleared through the insurance investigation, Cornelius N. Bliss, the treasurer of the Republican National Campaign Committee, in these words, was provoked today to a statement.

The proposition was furnished by the alleged contributor of Thomas Fortune Ryan that the $25,000 distributed in connection with the notorious Wall and Cortlandt street ferries had been contributed to the campaign committee toward the election of President McKinley.

Mr. Bliss denied completely and positively that any such contribution had been received either by him or the Republican Campaign Committee during that year.

Seen by the AMERICAN reporter he said:

Whole Story is Absurd.

"The whole story is absurd—impossible. Such a thing could have occurred."

"You may have forgotten it," said the reporter.

"Bliss" replied Mr. Bliss, "$25,000 is a large amount of money. No, I would have heard of this had any such thing occurred and I never had any hint of it until I took up the paper just now and read this story."

"You understand that it is time now to explain the Wall and Cortlandt street ferries deal?" said the reporter.

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Bliss. "It is quite a remarkable story."

"And a rather belated explanation?" suggested the reporter.

"I should say so," said Mr. Bliss.

Cannot Recall Contributions.

"Do you recall whether Mr. Ryan or Mr. Whitney, or any of the gentlemen named in connection with this deal, made contributions to the time campaign?" Mr. Bliss was asked.

"I don't recall any of them," was the reply. "I don't recall any of them of individual cases, but this article, (reading the paper) says I never had any hint of it until I took up the paper just now and read this story."

"Can you recall any circumstances which would suggest that any such contribution was made as explained by Mr. Ryan's friends?"

"I cannot," said Mr. Bliss. "I cannot recall any circumstances which would suggest that any such contribution was made as explained by Mr. Ryan's friends."

Today's Lesson in The American's Course for Salespeople

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal Company

During business hours is NOT THE RIGHT TIME for social affairs. Work when you work and play when you play. The clerk who is always entertaining visitors is not looked upon with favor.

The hours spent in the store belong to your employer. The hours spent outside of the store are yours. They should both be made good use of. You owe it to yourself that your hours of recreation and amusement are spent in a way that is profitable.

The work in a store is confining. Therefore a clerk should get as much RELAXATION and healthful pleasure as possible.

Exercise, out of doors as much as possible, physical culture, daily baths and regular hours are the salvation of the indoor worker. These save doctor's bills loss of time and inconvenience to your employer—to say nothing of keeping yourself in a normal and healthy condition.

The healthy, clean-looking clerk is the one who is appreciated, and late hours and personal neglect will work AGAINST SUCCESS.

Course Continued in Sunday's American. Today's Lesson.

Out out these "Lessons." Every Sunday we print a review and self-examination. A good plan is to clip the lessons and reviews out and paste them in a scrapbook. You will then have a manual on salesmanship that you could not buy for a good many dollars. It may be worth hundreds to you in increased salary.

Housewives Sell Old Furniture

The women who have learned to read "Want Ads" appreciate what these little ads do for the household. When you have an old-style bookcase or a table that is now too small for your growing family, you can sell them through the Want Ads. Read these little Want Ads every day—sooner or later you will find somebody who wants just the kind of a bookcase or table you no longer have any need for. The money you can get from the sale will help considerably in buying new articles for your home.

If you do not find an ad of somebody who wants what you have for sale, then write a small ad describing the articles which you want to sell and insert the ad in the American either Daily or Sunday—it will cost you only a few cents. It is almost certain that you will find somebody in the way who will make a bargain with you.
